MNLF releases general

2-night drama ends as government agrees to tripartite meeting

JOLO, SULU—THEY were detained for two nights in a camp surrounded by more than 1,000 armed men. But when they were finally allowed to leave, their hosts even hunched a cow for their going-away lunch.

Brig. Gen. Benjamin Dolofino, Undersecretary for the Peace Process, said about 20 companions were left at the camp of the Moro National Liberation Front, yesterday afternoon, ending a drama that lasted for over 30 hours and ended with the MNLF receiving cash, food and medical supplies.

Dolofino, in a white shirt, was hugged by Presidential Adviser for the Peace Process Jesus Durana at Camp Goodwill Station where a helicopter had brought the general and his companions after their release from the MNLF camp in Pansosso on Jolo island.

"We are happy that the crisis is over," Dolofino said, smiling broadly.

Santos, a former general himself who was almost not allowed to leave the MNLF camp, according to an Inquirer informant, wore a black jacket and a worried expression on his face.

One of those in the detained group said the MNLF had initially wanted to hold on to Santos for "insurance" with the government.

Santos denied this and recognized that the release of Manila during a ceremony inside the guerrilla compound had been the delay in their release.

"The media were not there as we had to wait," Santos told the Inquirer.

No Inquirer informant privy to the negotiation with MNLF Commander Habibullah Malik had noted on the presence of media during the turnover to the government side of firearms captured by the MNLF in previous encounters.

"No media, no release," was a condition which the source said Malik had insisted before allowing Dolofino's group.

Gov't may allow Nur's provisional release

By Di Tey
and Christine O. Avendaño

THE GOVERNMENT IS OPEN to the possibility of releasing Muslim leader Nur Misuari as he was congressional so he could represent the Moro National Liberation Front in legislative talks in Saudi Arabia, an official Department official said yesterday.

"He is released on one's own responsibility," said a government spokesman in a statement.

The matter of who will be charged of Misuari, should he be freed, is still up for discussion.

Senior Secretary Brian Sison said yesterday.

He said Misuari's provisional release would be discussed next week by the government peace panel and the Moro rebels.

"It all depends on the results of negotiations between the peace panel and the MNLF next week," Sison said.

But Executive Secretary Edgardo Sison appeared yesterday to take a hardline stance on the idea of Misuari's release, citing two reasons why this would be impossible.

"Number One, Misuari is facing a serious criminal charge and is detained. And Number Two, Misuari is not."

RP maids rally anew in HK over guidelines

By Blanche S. Rivera Cebu Bureau

HONG KONG—FOR THE 300th and straight Sunday, all roads lead by Filipino maids on their last day off to the Admiralty's Harcourt Garden in front of the Philippine Consulate.

Displaced by the recent government decision relating to the new deployment rules for 94-year-olds, thousands of domestic helpers again filled Hong Kong's streets to seek the scolding of the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) guidelines and the new rules of the Philippines' top labor officials.

About a thousand members of the Ames in Land (JL) Church, the biggest Philippine evangelical Christian group in Hong Kong, turned up at yesterday's protest as part of the Philippines' top labor officials.

At least 13 other church groups and Catholic parishes have joined the campaign.

"We are young women, but we are long-termers. We are the Church people. We are not only young, but we are old," said a group leader. "We are old."

Organizers said about the 1,000 protesters.

UN-sponsored report smoking gun on global warming

By Arundo Dorville

(Part 1 of 2)

THE LIGHTS AT THE EPPLE Tower in Paris went off for five minutes on Thursday evening as the world awaited the release of the United Nations-sponsored report providing the "smoking gun" on the threat of global warming to life on earth.

Business continued off their lights to raise awareness about energy efficiency and fossil-fuel pollution, which is blamed for climate change. The market spread to levels near the record low.

When the UN International

Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) issued the report at the gray Geneva headquarters in Paris on Friday evening, it shocked the world with an apocalyptic vision of a looming ecological disaster unless steps were taken to check emissions of greenhouse gases linked to global warming.

ANALYSIS

The report warned of melting ice sheets, rising sea levels, heat waves, increasing droughts, heavy rainfall in some regions, and stronger hurricanes and storms in tropical countries, potentially including the Philippines in the decades to come.

These are the consequences of global warming due to the greenhouse gases released into the atmosphere. Instead of reducing the heat from the sun back to space, the greenhouse gas trap it.

In the most powerful language yet used by scientists in their assessment of the future of the planet, the report concluded for the first time that the global evidence of climate change caused by fossil fuel (mainly oil and coal) emissions was "unequivocal."

Pacquiao-Morales rematch over beer

By Jeanine W. Pags and Francis Ochoa

THERE WERE TENSE MOMENTS

And it wasn't the staged tension, where Erik "El Terrible" Morales crashes a beer joint in the middle of a Mexican drink, approaching a table where Manny Pacquiao and trainer Freddie Roach are seated and regrettably including the Philippines' top boxing coach.

During the making of the film Miguel Corp. (recovered) that was only one in a series of sports—proof of its potential blockbuster status—but also one to go down in advertising history as a major trap, there was still leftover tension from a better time. "They could feel that they were uncomfortable with each other," said a film Miguel insider, who revealed the tension what happened behind the scenes on a condition of anonymity.

The first scene that was shot was the main scene, and the official reveal that when "they" seemed to be right next to each other, you could tell the body language (that they were uncomfortable). It was leaving [to the left], Manny was leaving [to the right].

It did not help that Roach, the American trainer who spent

'Cough up our money!'

Tonyboy Cojuangco was forced last year by the Supreme Court to return 111,415 shares of the Philippine Telecommunication Investment Corp. (PTIC) for their being part of the ill-gotten Marcos wealth.

Al's well that ends well, right?

No sir! There is still the unfinished business of collecting from Tonyboy the dividends that accrued from the PTIC shares. He's not yet off the hook, until he coughs up money that belongs to the Filipino people.

And how much does Tonyboy owe us in dividends? Up to 1993 alone, then Rep. Joker Arroyo estimated it at $500 million. In Congress, Arroyo rallied at Tonyboy's family emerging as the "richest" in the Philippines, at the expense of poor Filipinos.

"In the Fortune and Forbes listing of the richest families in the world, only the Ayalas were listed but they [unlike the family of Tonyboy Cojuangco] did not reach the $300 million mark," said Arroyo then. "What we are talking about is $500 million... we cannot treat this as a laughing matter."

We, the people, are not laughing either.

Tonyboy must now owe us billions of dollars in dividends he got from the ill-gotten shares. Justice has to prevail: Tonyboy should be made to return what does not belong to him!

3 DAYS TO GO

lives better.

Our lives would have been better, if only everyone has access to safe and affordable medicines...

WE NEED NOT SUFFER.

We are grateful to our Senators for taking the first step to reduce the prices of medicines.

With only 3 session days remaining,
We appeal to our Congressmen,
Make medicines affordable and accessible for all.

Warming may cause Maldives to disappear

COORING—THEIR ISLAND HOMES could disappear in a matter of years, according to a study by the United Nations. The Maldives may disappear within generations unless climate change, particularly sea-level rise, is stopped.

With a United Nations climate panel forecasting world sea levels likely to rise by 50 cm (20 in.) by 2100, the Maldives, a 1,200-island archipelago in the Indian Ocean, is at risk of being submerged. The islands are low-lying, with the highest point only 2.4 m (8 ft) above sea level.

The average height of the islands is 1.5 meters (5 feet) above sea level.

Therefore, if the rate of sea-level rise continues at 50 cm, it would take a couple of centuries at the most to totally submerge the Maldives, an island group in the Indian Ocean.

"That of course will happen only if there is no action taken to slow down the rate at a global scale," he added. "It is further unclear whether this country is at risk, and that really needs to be studied to ensure our future survival."

Nevertheless, the treaty is not—accommodating to pressure on states to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

Under the Kyoto Protocol, which is already being signed, nations are asked to reduce their greenhouse gas emissions.

The experience of the nation's 260,000 people living on the islands is that the Maldives are disappearing. The islands are being eroded by the sea, and the islands are being lost to the sea.

The Maldives are also suffering from the effects of climate change.

Thailand OKs copycat version of topselling heart drug

BANGKOK—THAILAND, WHICH PROVIDES free medical care for the poor, is considering a powerful pharmaceutical industry by licensing the drug to a private company to produce a generic version of a blockbuster heart drug.

In a recent decision, the Thai government has decided to allow importation of a generic version of a blockbuster heart drug, a decision that has caused a stir in the pharmaceutical industry.

Thailand's decision has drawn outrage from drug companies here and in the United States, who say it is a slap in the face of their intellectual property rights.

"We are not helping our patients, and we are not helping our economy," said a spokesman for the Thai pharmaceutical industry.

Anti-money laundering coverage to be expanded AMLC wants lawyers, accountants to be liable too

By Doreen C. Duran

THE PHILIPPINES' ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING COUNCIL has initiated new measures to oblige lawyers, accountants and other "gatekeepers" of financial deals to play a greater role in the global crusade against dirty money and terrorist financing.

In an interview, AMLC executive director Thomas Aquino said the broad watchdog had serious concerns regarding the members of the Philippine bar in compliance with the AMLC requirements on suspicious and covered transactions.

He added that the AMLC had initially written to the Professional Regulation Commission to oblige certified public accountants to do the same as part of their professional practice.

"We are gradually asking for the registration of the covered institutions to include the gatekeepers," Aquino said, noting the proposal was in line with recent instructions being pushed by the Paris-based Financial Action Task Force (FATF) against money laundering.

Money laundering is a crime wherein the proceeds of an unlawful activity are used in financial transactions to make them appear to have originated from legitimate sources.

"Initially, the IMF has identified the criminals and organized crime groups are lawyers, accountants, rulers, and crime leaders and previous anti-money laundering efforts in the 1980s or 1990s provided," Aquino said.

He said inquiries on the institutions across the globe were already addressing the concerns on gatekeepers and money were already in compliance.

"So that's why we don't want to be a step behind," Aquino said, noting that the AMLC would like the preliminary measures on gatekeepers in place within this year.

Overseas, the gatekeepers will be required to comply with the same reporting, record-keeping and know-your customer (KYC) requirements that other covered institutions like banks and other financial institutions were obliged to do.

Philippine law against dirty money allows the government to look into any transaction—whether a single national transaction—worth at least P500,000, more than the previous threshold of P1 million. This gave authorities more leeway to probe suspicious cash deposits and investments, or defined as those "without any credible source of origin, violating trade obligations or contract."

In the past, authorities had to seek a court order before they are given access to suspicious bank accounts in view of the bank secrecy law.

Anti-money laundering coverage to be expanded most of the Anti-Money Laundering Law, Republic Act No. 8799, have been passed to Congress by way of legislation. Because this will be a difficult process, so if we could do it by legislation, we'll do it.

We want to be in compliance before we are again criticized by the Anti-People Group money laundering. We hope it will be in place within the year. We'll also increase the strength of the law.

MANTRADE DEVELOPMENT CORP.

PNOC-EC eyes secondary offering

By Rainer G. He

PNOC EXPLORATION CORP (PNOC-EC), a government-owned or controlled corporation based on the exchange, wants to increase public trading of the company's stock by 40 to 45 per cent within the year.

Peter Agustin A., officer in charge of public firm PNOC-EC, said only 17 percent of PNOC-EC's securities are held by the public.

The PNOC-EC board, he said, was planning to launch secondary offering after the May-September 2007 period, but the company has not yet decided on the size of the offering.

Energy Secretary Raphael Irala confirmed this is a separate initiative, saying the matter will be under study and that the PNOC-EC board should come up with something concrete soon.

"The secondary offering is still being studied. If it's not economic, then it's not a good idea," he said.

He said the secondary offering could be important for the sector because it will provide more liquidity to PNOC-EC, including the sale of 30 percent of the state's 10.5 percent stake in the Philippine Energy Risk Insurance project.

"We're not sure, as companies want to raise funds to finance operations on government guarantee and loans," he said.

Agustin said the prospects of PNOC-EC financial recovery were still dimmed on what price it will pay for it. It will be good if it can be self-sufficient.

He said the company is not sure if it can be self-sufficient.

"For example, the PNOC-EC is already a new ball because there is no history of the company," he said.

He said PNOC-EC should have enough cash to pay for operations and development activities.

He said the company is not sure if it can be self-sufficient.

Net borrowings drop by 54%

P544.3B in old debts paid

By Michael V. Ramos

THE NATIONAL GOVERNMENT'S net borrowings last year reached only P375.5 billion, 54 percent lower than year-ago level, as it aggressively pursued debt reduction efforts.

Net borrowing is the difference between the gross liabilities incurred by government and the amount of previously obtained obligations repaid.

Data from the Department of Finance showed that of the P327.9 billion worth of new borrowings last year, foreign debts amounted to P118.5 billion. Some P365 billion in net domestic borrowings were recorded.

According to the SOF data, gross borrowings last year amounted to P522.2 billion while debts that were paid in the same period reached P146.7 billion. The bulk of the borrowings was used to pay maturing obligations. The P44.5-billion spent by the government to pay off liabilities was 61 percent higher than the P27.1 billion recorded in 2005.

The Bureau of the Treasury (BTR) last year engaged in debt swaps in line with the government's debt and liability management strategy. Under a debt swap, the government's claim on foreign borrowings with lower interest rates and less volatile maturities is replaced by domestic securities.

National Treasury Under Secretary for External Finance and Debt Management said that the swap strategy is a key to help the government lower its borrowing cost. He said the government saved about P18 billion last year from the reduced cost of borrowings brought about by the debt swaps.

In the meantime, the BTR last year posted an income of P307 billion, exceeding its target of P25 billion. The BTR's income is composed of earnings from investments in dollar-denominated assets and the dividends collected from state-owned firms.

One said that aside from engaging in debt swaps to lower the cost of government borrowings, the BTR also strengthened the management of dividend contributions by state-owned firms.

UBS sees muted market growth in '07

By Dexter L. Lucas

PHILIPPINE STOCKS REMAIN attractive and are expected to rise further this year, although not as the recent runs in 2005, according to a major stock firm.

In a press briefing, UBS chief country representative Lucas said in a 10 and 100 day "very aggressive" on the country's economic outlook, despite the uncertainties posed by the ongoing global economic crisis.

"We see the potential (stock market) index at 1,000," he said. "2007 target represents a 10 percent average increase in the value of the stock market index."

The year's expected increase, however, falls in comparison to the 20 percent increase experienced by the local stock market in 2006, as the government's successful fiscal reforms made investors take notice of the local economy's progress.

Despite expectations of a rise in 2007, Lucas said foreign funds managers would continue looking into the country's financial system, especially the equities market.

"Investors continue to favor the Philippines," he said. "They like our macro story."

Lucas said the local economy's strong performance, thanks to a mix of strong leading and lagging indicators, kept the stock market index at 1,000.

Having underperformed the global stock market, Lucas said, the Philippines is likely to see a rise in the value of its stock market index, mostly by getting back on track in its foreign debt—1.2 billion dollars—by 2007.

UBS also sees a rise in the value of the stock market index, mostly by getting back on track in its foreign debt—1.2 billion dollars—by 2007.

every from manufacturing, it is not isolated news. Businesses from our overseas work sites are still finding growth in high technology, IT, health, IT, and consumer goods, health services, alternative consumer products and health, and level of affordable properties."

Based on a recent data, optimism in the Philippines has been rising steadily.

When the Philippines last participated in the BQI in 2000, business owners were optimistic, with a confidence of 1 percent due partly to the country's flagging electronics sector.

In the following year however, the Philippines posted a 10 percent decline, as local business owners reported a remarkable loss in confidence in the economy. This percentage was more higher than the global average (loss of +4) percent.

Although the country's growth rate was modest compared to its Asian neighbors, the Philippines BQI growth for the three years leading to 2001 was a perceptible increase.

This time, the Philippines registered a double-digit rise and a higher confidence than even its Asian neighbors like Hong Kong (+50 percent), Malaysia (+38 percent), Thailand (+19 percent) and Taiwan (+14 percent).

Business owners are expected to continue with the rise over 22 months as the Philippines again shows the upper part of economic optimism scores.

Overall, the BQI shows that business in the country is in a positive state, with 29 percent of business owners reporting an increase in their optimism's performance in 2002 with 24 being more optimistic than last year.

While still continuing to be confident of the economic outlook, for the first time in 10 years, business owners are expected to continue to be optimistic about the Philippine economy (BQI), a balance of +40 percent, to 14 percent.

According to the report, business optimism is expected to continue to rise in the past year, in particular, double-digit percent (+41 percent) in 2002, double-digit percent (+41 percent) in 2003, double-digit percent (+41 percent) in 2004 and double-digit percent (+41 percent) in 2005.

The second BQI conducted by International Business Development Group (IBDG) is based on 2002, building on the European Business Survey which is run from 1993 to 2001. The survey was conducted by European Business Development Group (IBDG) and the Philippine Business Development Group (IBDG).

Stopping abruptly doesn't work for everyone. Reducing the number of cigarettes you smoke before completely quitting is a clinically proven alternative. Start by cutting down a target number of cigarettes that you smoke each day, while using Nicorette to control your cravings. Then it's easier to quit for good.
